

Levantine Arabic transcript:

هبة: شو هن "social norms" في الأردن "between genders"؟
هديل: العادات والتقاليد "makes each gender go to a different school" يعني مثلا كل
ال "males" بروحوا "at one school..during..from..from middle school to high school"
و "school" و "all females go to one school" بس هم أمتا يعني "in they actually feel"
"that they are in the same environment is in college or university"
"co-education" وحتى لما الشاب يعني البنت تيجي تتكلم معاه تسألو "questions or become" his friend, he is not used to it and he assumes that there is a relationship between them. Because this is almost like his first contact with a girl.”

هبة: هل هذا موجود بكل المجتمع الأردني ولا..؟
هديل: لأ مش بكل المجتمع الأردني, حسب "where or what part of Al-Urdun this male community where they are not used to" يعني "is from relationships or inter-activity with males and females, of course he is going "to be shy." بس يعني "for instance in college" ممكن بنت تتكلم مع ولد وممكن يكونوا
"friends" وممكن يكون في علاقه بينهم, بس بره ال "college it is not acceptable" يعني.

English translation:

Heba: What are the social norms between genders?

Hadeel: The norms and traditions require each gender to go to a different school. For example, all males go to one school from middle school to high school, and all females go to one school. But the time when they feel they are in the same is in college or university. Here we have coeducation. Even when a girl comes to talk to a guy or ask him questions or become his friend, he isn't used to it and assumes that there is a relationship between them because it's almost like his first contact with a girl.

Heba: Is this present in all of the communities in Jordan?

Hadeel: No, not in all the Jordanian society. It depends on where and in what parts of Jordan is this male from. For example, if he comes from a community where they are not used to relationships or interactivity between males and females, they are going to be shy. But, for example, in college a girl may speak to a guy, and they may be friends or in a relationship, but outside college it isn't acceptable
