

English translation:

Umm... the duty that parents have towards their kids is, I mean, just as we said, naming them well when they are newborn, praying for them, and then we have a tradition in Islam... umm... for boys, we have a circumcision tradition, circumcising them... teaching the kid good manners, raising him/her with education,... to raise him/her, I mean... umm... to be individuals who fulfill his/her duties towards society, government, nation. I mean... umm... raising a kid who is beneficial to society, beneficial to government, and beneficial to the nation is a must.

Then, the kid has learned manners, has been educated, obtained knowledge, [been] taught well, had lectures in schools, in institutions, has been provided with good knowledge, so that, let's say, his/her age reaches to the age of marriage; the duty of parents, I mean, is also to marry them to a good person. If it's a girl, marrying her with a good person; if it's a boy, I mean, marrying him with a girl from a good family, umm... a family that raised their daughter with manners is one of the duties of parents. I mean, it is a must for parents to fulfill these duties.

About CultureTalk: CultureTalk is produced by the Five College Center for the Study of World Languages and housed on the LangMedia Website. The project provides students of language and culture with samples of people talking about their lives in the languages they use everyday. The participants in CultureTalk interviews and discussions are of many different ages and walks of life. They are free to express themselves as they wish. The ideas and opinions presented here are those of the participants. Inclusion in CultureTalk does not represent endorsement of these ideas or opinions by the Five College Center for the Study of World Languages, Five Colleges, Incorporated, or any of its member institutions: Amherst College, Hampshire College, Mount Holyoke College, Smith College and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst.