English translation:

A: Another writer by the name of Reda Houhou. He was a writer during the French colonization. He wrote many books; the majority of them are short stories with an ironic style. When the liberation revolution started, I believe, he was arrested by the French and people later found his body—you know, he was killed. This is about Reda Houhou. We shouldn't forget Malek Bennabi. He played an important role especially during the French colonialism and even after independence. He wrote a lot about the Islamic Renaissance; he criticized the Islamic societies a lot, and he also analyzed the situation in the Muslim countries, and also how the Islamic civilization fell and how one could revive it again. This is it. After independence, Malek Bennabi tried to change and honestly his way of thinking was... he sort of thought far ahead. At times, there were some people who initially didn't understand him. Malek Bennabi was a well-known thinker and philosopher, and he wrote in French. One of the famous Algerian historians is Boukassam Sa'dallah. He wrote a lot about history—history books, and especially about the history of Algeria and the national movement. They [these writers] had much of their learning under the Qur'anic and Islamic schools. There is also another famous writer, his name is Tahar Ouettar. He was a writer of novels and short stories, amongst which, "L'As" [French for "The Ace"]. He also was a writer during the French colonialism as well as after independence. He wrote many books.

About CultureTalk: CultureTalk is produced by the Five College Center for the Study of World Languages and housed on the LangMedia Website. The project provides students of language and culture with samples of people talking about their lives in the languages they use every day. The participants in CultureTalk interviews and discussions are of many different ages and walks of life. They are free to express themselves as they wish.
