English translation:

Man: The, the study day here at the college ... I wake up at seven o'clock; I wake up at seven o'clock. I have breakfast or such, it is then 7:30. I go to the college; then it's eight o'clock, 8:15 or so. If I have an early lecture, I attend it; if I don't have one, then I wake up at 8:00, and the lecture is at 9:00.

... ah ... I go to the lecture, I attend the lecture, whether I have one, two, three lectures. And after the lecture, I meet with my friends. Perhaps if we have a no-show lecture in the middle, I go to the library; I read in the library, because the library of the College of Sciences is one of the richest libraries at the university. In it, I can read the book of Arabian Nights. I already read a little part of it ... the book Songs .... ah .... [There are] many books over there, poetry and poets. There are so many books at the library, and books that have a relation to the college. And the professors cooperate with us. I mean, if [there is] any, anything that I don't know, I can go to the doctor [professor] at any time and ask him, and he would answer me. And the doctors ... we have made a family arrangement. I mean, all of us are one family at the College of Sciences. We all love each other. We all worry about each other. And generally, by the way, I mean all the Egyptian population is like this. The Egyptian population loves each other and loves his brother. Ah ... and ... ah ... wishes his brother well, and like this.

This was the study at a glance of the College of Sciences.
