English translation:

Woman: For instance, when I want to buy my things, where is the place that I want to buy from? Usually, there is the supermarket. Currently, everything is available in the supermarket, from food, from drink, from home appliances, from electrical appliances, from all the household accessories. I mean, the small shops [I go to], if there is something that I want to pick up in a quick way, there are small shops close to the house; [there is] a small supermarket. I enter, take the stuff I want and I return. And if I want all the stuff for the house there is a large supermarket; there are large shops, and currently they are available in almost in every area. The person can go to them, whether he wants house appliances, electrical appliances, or if he wants home furnishings, or if he wants ... all of these things are found and available.
