English translation:

Woman: Now we will make the second cup, which we call the middle cup... We will make the middle cup. This is to help the pot boil. For me, the day that I don't drink tea, I don't feel rested... Now the pot is boiling... This is called dadja and cups that don't have dadja are not enjoyable to drink. We don't just make tea with one hand – the other hand too can participate. This is called the dadja; we mix it to make the dadja, which is the white thing. This makes the tea in the cup tasty; it tastes nice and sweet, and drinkable... Both man and woman can drink it and everyone else because it tastes well and it has the taste of 'ilq and has the dadja. The cups that have dadja are the only ones that it is enjoyable to drink from. And if there is no dadja, no one can enjoy drinking the tea... Now, we will rinse off the cups... We put them in a tray, until we clean the big tray. This is so that the cups stay clean because they should be clean at all times... We put the cups back in the tray. While the pot boils, we make more dadja. And now the cups are clean and if you wish, you can make more dadja, you can make it as many times as you like.
